Last summer, I went to Taiwan to learn Chinese. Although I had an amazing time there, I also experienced some culture shock. The first day that I arrived in Taipei, I was surprised by how many scooters there were on the road. It's very rare to see people riding scooters or motorcycles in Canada.

One of the things I was most pleasantly surprised by was how safe it is in Taiwan. At cafés, I often saw people leave their bags and laptops at their tables while they ordered or went to the washroom. I would never do this back home, because my belongings might get stolen.

By the end of the summer, I got more used to life in Taiwan. While culture shock was difficult at first, I found it interesting and fun to learn about a different culture.
