On 3 February 1975, something happened on an airplane which showed just how badly in-flight food can go wrong. This was during a Japan Airlines flight from Alaska to Denmark. Ninety minutes before landing, the 364 passengers were all served omelets for breakfast. For some extra flavor, canned ham was added to the dish. Unfortunately, for everyone onboard almost all of this meat contained very harmful bacteria. Despite this, it still tasted normal, and most people finished their entire meals.

In all, 197 flyers, including a crew member, suddenly fell very ill. They began throwing up all over the plane. Many also had terrible runny tummies and stomach cramps. The food poisoning was so serious that 144 people had to be rushed to the hospital as soon as the plane landed!

In the end, it turned out that one of the three in-flight cooks who had prepared the meals was to blame. The bacteria in the ham exactly matched that found in open wounds on two fingers of his right hand, so no doubt remained as to who was at fault.

Luckily, both pilots had steak for breakfast instead!

40. What is the main idea of this passage?
- (A) What people on a Japan Airlines flight had for breakfast.
(B) A food poisoning incident that happened in the air.
(C) The common symptoms of food poisoning.
(D) Ingredients in processed food are risky for the human body.

41. Which of the following was the source of the harmful bacteria mentioned in the passage?

- (A) The knives used to cut the ham.
- (B) The flight attendants who delivered the meals.
- (C) The open wounds on the chef's fingers.
- (D) The dish rag on the table.

42. Which of the following is NOT true about this passage?

- (A) The incident happened almost half a century ago.
- (B) The poisoned meat didn't taste odd.
- (C) The pilots had runny tummies and stomach cramps.
- (D) More than half of the passengers fell ill.
