When Helen Keller was born in 1880 in the United States, she was a healthy, normal baby. However, she then became very ill when she was around one and half years old. She eventually survived the sickness, but she could no longer see or hear. Because she could not express her needs and wants with ease, she would get angry easily and started hurting herself and others.

Her parents saw that Helen needed special help and found a teacher named Annie Sullivan, who was once blind but regained her sight after treatment. Annie accepted the job and started teaching Helen a series of hand signs to help her communicate better. But Helen had difficulty understanding what Annie was trying to teach her since she went blind and deaf at a very young age. Though they both struggled greatly, Annie never gave up on Helen.

One day, Annie finally got through to her. She was holding Helen's hand under a stream of water when she started spelling the word "water" on Helen's other hand. It was then that the young girl realized there is a name for everything and that this was what Annie was trying to teach her. All in all, it was a great turning point in Helen's life and from then on, she never stopped learning.

31. What of the following is the best title for this passage?

- (A) How to Really Spell the Word "Water."
- (B) How Helen Gave Annie a Hand.
- (C) Why Sign Language Doesn't Work.

- (B) The first sign Helen learnt was the one for "hand."
- (C) Annie used water to teach Helen many different signs.
- (D) Helen's parents were able to offer Annie special help.

Chef Andre' Chiang(江振誠) is a famous Taiwanese cook. Chef Chiang went to France to train at a three-Michelin-star restaurant when he was fifteen. He tried his best to learn and kept working hard for years. He paid attention to details and perfected every dish. However, he realized, "I am never going to make French food better than the local cooks." His progress came when he turned to his cultural roots to add an extra something to his cooking.

Chef Chiang opened his own restaurant and earned Michelin stars. But in 2018, he decided to close his restaurant in Singapore. This was not because the restaurant was not making any profits. Success for him then was not just about being rich or famous, but about self-expression and helping new chefs. Chef Chiang came up with a different target. He wanted to go back to his homeland to help train future stars. He would keep going on to reach his goal.

33. What is the passage mainly about?

- (A) A future star in Singapore.
- (B) Chef Andre' Chiang's work and plans.
- (C) A three-Michelin-star restaurant.
- (D) Chef Andre' Chiang's new restaurant.

34. Why did Chef Chiang close his restaurant in Singapore in 2018?

- (A) He was tired of cooking.
- (B) He wanted to move back to France.
- (C) He wanted to focus on helping new chefs.
- (D) The restaurant was not making enough money.

35. According to the passage, what might Chef Chiang do next in the near future?

- (A) He might cook by himself at a new restaurant in Taipei.
- (B) He might work hard to be a three-Michelin-star chef.
- (C) He might work in a three-Michelin-star restaurant.
- (D) He might start a program to train talented young chefs.
