Passage 3

Have you ever turned to coffee or energy drinks when you needed a boost? Both drinks give you energy, but they affect your body in different ways. They taste different, too!

Let's look at their __41__. Coffee comes from roasted coffee beans, and people have been drinking it for hundreds of years. Energy drinks are newer and made in factories. They usually contain caffeine, sugar, and vitamins.

Their flavor also __42__. Coffee tastes bitter, but adding milk or sugar can make it taste smoother. When it's served hot, it can feel warm and comforting, __43__ some people prefer it iced. Energy drinks are typically served cold and taste like soda—sweet and carbonated. Some people love the taste while others find it too strong.

So how do they keep you __44__? The secret lies in caffeine, which helps you feel alert. An energy drink contains similar or higher levels of caffeine than a standard cup of coffee. It also has extra things like taurine to boost energy quickly. Coffee, on the other hand, takes longer to kick in.

__45__, both drinks can help, but too much of either can cause problems. For example, they can damage your teeth or upset your stomach. Be careful with how much you drink!
