There's no doubt that humans have a large, and often negative, effect on the environment. Sometimes, we harm a natural environment so badly that we simply abandon it. For instance, the 1986 nuclear accident in Chernobyl(車諾比), Soviet Union (now Ukraine), was the worst disaster of its kind in history. As a result, 350,000 people were forced to leave an area of 2,600 km<sup>2</sup> around Chernobyl. However, after humans abandoned Chernobyl, something interesting and unexpected happened. Although it still isn't safe for humans to live there, plants and animals have taken over. Today, Chernobyl has the thickest forests in all of Ukraine. Not having to share the place with humans, many animals have moved into the area, including some rare species like European bison(野牛).

In her 2022 book Islands of Abandonment, author Cal Flyn visits Chernobyl and other places like it around the world. In the book's introduction, she visits the Islands of the Forth, just off the coast from Edinburgh, capital of her homeland, Scotland. Occupied by various armies throughout history, the now abandoned islands have become home to thousands of birds and other sea creatures. In the following chapters, she visits abandoned mines, industrial sites, and war zones. In each one, she finds the same thing: without humans, wildlife doesn't just survive. It prospers.

The information in Flyn's book has been confirmed by numerous studies. They all point to the same conclusion: when humans destroy areas of the Earth, it is possible for the environment to recover, and even faster than we thought. While this doesn't remove the dangers of climate change and global warming, it does give us some hope for the future. What's more, as more people move to cities, large areas of the planet are being retaken by nature.

43. What is the main idea of the passage?
(A) It may be impossible for us to end global warming.
(B) The earth can fix itself after we damage it.
(C) Soon many cities will be taken over by animals.
(D) Humans are damaging the planet, and it can't go back to the way it was.
44. Which of the following is the correct meaning of "prosper" in the second paragraph?
(A) To live in large numbers. (B) To be dangerous to humans.
(C) To escape from death. (D) To earn lots of money.
45. What would the author of this passage probably agree with?
(A) We don't need to worry about climate change. (B) Animals that live in abandoned places are in danger.
(C) Even more places will be abandoned in the future. (D) It takes a long time for damaged places to self-recover.
